“ Every time I would talk to Jay... whether it was in kilbourne or the Octoberfest or where ever ...he would make me home sick from when I use to live in Kilbourne... when I was younger. Jay had the kilbourne accent down to a tee. He stayed in Kilbourne longer than most of us. He was a true" Kilbournite". A part of Kilbourne died yesterday. JEFF S.

“ There's a picture on his Facebook with him laying out in the Florida sun in black speedos....I remember when we moved there in 1985 and he and Brad came with...it always rains in Atlanta, everyone said, before we headed out for our 20something hour drive. Of course, it did. And our windsheild wipers didnt work. So Brad and Jay got the idea to tie shoeatrings to the wipers. I think Brad was in the front passenger side leaning out the window and Jay in the backseat behind mom, driving. Pulling back and forth as fast as they could go. It was scary but hysterical when i look back at it. It was raining ao hard, they didnt have a chance lol. Ill never forgwt that summer driving around the collegelake in Lakeland every night when he picked me up from work. McDonalds and the lake were a nightly event for us. He made my adjustment from small town cornfields to city life in Florida somewhat bareable. Brad didn't like it and eventually went home but Jay couldn't get enough. Laying out in the front yard full of nothing but sand and sand burrs, all oiled up in his black speedos...but he didn't care. He was never, not one time, afraid to be exactly who he was.... ALWAYS. SO MANY MEMORIES AND NOT ENOUGH FINGERTIP TO WRITETHEM ALL DOWN.

“ Gosh darn it! Was trying to revise and memory posted before I could make change and finish. I remember him teaching me to play the spoons one Sunday Funday. I woke up with blisters next morning, wondered if I got burned by cig, but then remembered with a big smile, paying the spoons! There was always a fun time with Jay and the whole Justice family. My thoughts, prayers and love are with you all. Family and friends alike because everyone was treated as family. I felt welcomed from the moment I meet them. Love to all
