“ I am picturing a beautiful smile and I agree a kind person. One of my favorite students as well, who always took the time to chat. We last spoke in Oakford, and there was that smile, visible both on the face and in the eyes. I am so sorry. Heidi Scaggs

“ I am glad that I had the chance Priya, and that she had the chance to know herself before leaving this world. In our last conversation, she expressed finally feeling good about her body and identity, though this world did not make it easy for her to love herself. She was loved, and she will be missed.

“ Priya had a heart of gold. She never judged anyone despite their station in life. She accepted all those that came across her path with open arms, a warm smile, and an open heart. The struggles she encountered never detered her from seeking the happiness she deserved. In one of my most vulnerable times of need she heroically rushed to my defense and stood by me until I was able to again stand on my own. These are the things she will be remembered for. It was her dedication as a friend; her strength under pressures that we will most likely never be wrought to stand against; the content of her character, that made her such a remarkable human being. She loved and accepted all of us in her life for who we are, as we must respect her in death for who she was. I lost a dear friend, and my life will never be the same. Rest In Peace Forever, Priya.

“ I taught Zach in jr. high. I remember he was reading the Harry Potter books at the time, and was so excited about them. He got my whole family started with them. I wish you didn't have to go through this; the pain is unimaginable. You have my heart and prayers.
